

December 7, 2023

Contributor:

Ridge Fogerson is the writer of the blog. He just recently got through Greek 1. He currently has one semester of languages left and he is so excited. He is currently enjoying his Christmas break working and enjoying the company of friends and family.

Phone Number:

618-615-8803

Email:

ridgefogerson7@gmail.com

Website:

www.chesterfbc.org

Through Our Eyes - The Unordinary King

It's that time of the year, folks – the absolute best! When I got back home from college, I was hit with the cozy glow of a decked-out Christmas tree and the mouthwatering smells drifting from the kitchen. Christmas joy is in full swing, and it's nothing short of awesome!

This Advent season, I decided to shake things up a bit. I jumped into a daily reading plan, and let me tell you, it's a game-changer. The book I have is a 25-day reading of Charles Spurgeon's Christmas messages – just a couple of pages each day, but it's packed with golden nuggets.

This daily reading has shifted my view on the birth of Jesus. The big eye-opener for me? Jesus wasn't just any baby; He was born a King. Wrap your head around that! In history, babies usually have to wait around to become kings, right (they are usually princes)? Not Jesus. He came into the world as royalty, straight from the right hand of the Father to a humble manger, ditching perfection for the brokenness of earth.

So, as we gear up for Christmas, I'm all in on channeling my inner Jesus. He knew how to love and serve, and that's my game plan for the season. Let's make this Christmas about spreading love and doing some good for others. Let's be real, that's what it's all about, right?

★★★★★ 621